MARIAN UNIVERSITY SPEAKING STUDIO

Collaborate. Engage. Inspire.

Collaborate.

At the Marian University Speaking Studio, you'll work one-on-one with a consultant to set goals and find interesting ways to reach them. The studio is a collaborative space where we share ideas, meet goals, and engage audiences.

Engage.

Interested in hearing other people share big ideas or maybe you're interested in sharing your own ideas with a small group? Join us each semester for our signature Studio Speaker Series, followed by Studio Sessions (small group dialogues). Check in with our Facebook or Instagram for up-to-date schedules.

Inspire.

Once visitors leave the studio, they go on to inspire audiences big and small. Whether you're practicing an informative speech for COM 101 or a testimonial for a city council meeting, we're here to listen and support your speaker goals.

Common Questions

What do I talk about?

The best speakers talk about things that matter to them. What makes you excited? What confuses, angers, or inspires you? Start there. At the Studio, we can help you sort out the details.

I'm feeling nervous, what do I do?

Visit us! We can help you craft a personal plan of action. Everyone experiences communication anxiety differently, so first, it's important to understand what you're feeling. Then you can discover strategies/solutions for those feelings.

Hint: deep breathing helps almost everyone.

How do I practice on my own?

Start a few days earlier than you think you need to (no one ever complains about practicing too much. In fact, it's one of the top strategies for combating communication anxiety). Time yourself every time you practice. Practice in front of a mirror, in front of friends, but most importantly, practice saying the words out loud. Running through the speech in your head doesn't help you give the speech out loud. Make your practice as close to performance as possible.
